

ARTP Spirometry Certification Update

The Association for Respiratory Technology and Physiology (ARTP) have been working hard over the past 6 months, collating feedback and auditing the entire certification process in order to identify areas which can be improved. We are working with our partners in spirometry, including PCRS and ARNS, to make sure the spirometry certification is a marker of quality assured diagnostic spirometry, that healthcare professionals across the UK can be proud of.

Over the coming weeks and months we will be publishing the results of our audit, and creating ways to provide continuous feedback to ensure we are communicating with spirometry stakeholders. We will also be making a few improvements to the certification process. Look out for updates on social media channels, in the ARTP spirometry newsletter and in emails if you are currently completing the certification or are on the national register.
